STATE NEWS.

Aroostook.

A very heavy thunder shower passed over a portion of northern Aroostook, during the afternoon of July 4th. At Maysville Centre, hail accompanied the rain, and did considerable damage. It broke out thirty-two squares of glass in the house of Edward Wiggin, thirty-nine in F. B. Smith's, fifteen in Capt. Henry Rolfe's, and forty-nine in the Maysville Centre school house, and more or less in nearly every house in the neighborhood. At Mr. Kneeland's, on the Ashland road, the hail stones were as large as small hen's eggs. Mrs. Kneeland gathered one that measured three and a half inches in circumference.

Cumberland.

Thursday evening, a well-dressed young man, giving his name as Arthur Cummings, and his residence, Portland, hired a valuable team at Sawyer's stable for a two hours' drive. Neither man nor team has yet put in an appearance at the stable, and Mr. Sawyer has placed officers on the young rascal's track.

Thursday evening, Hon. Geo. F. Emery, of Portland, was sitting with his family on his door stoop, when by an accident his chair slipped from the step, and he was thrown headlong down the stone stairs, striking on his head and severely injuring himself with strains and bruises. A physician administered ether and under its influence an examination was made, and the sufferer was put to bed. It was found that no bones were broken.

Franklin.

The Farmington Chronicle says: It is said that not the usual number of French Canadians will come into the county during the haying season this year, on account of the decision of the Treasury department, which is that their teams must pay the $17 in duties, outright, when they cross the line, and it will not be paid back when they return to Canada, as has been the custom in previous years. Fifteen Canadians have arrived here thus far, against fifty to a hundred in years past. These nine men were brought to the Canadian line in teams by friends, then they came on foot to Kingfield and hired conveyance from there. It is claimed by some that the Canadians who come here in the haying season, crowd out the Yankees by working at wages altogether too low; time will develop whether there is any ground for such a claim.

Kennebec.

J. Wiener, A. M., Principal of Wiener Institute, New York City, with twenty-two of his pupils, is spending the summer in Readfield, on the shore of Lake Maranacook. With boating, fishing and riding, the boys are having a pleasant vacation.

The stand pipes of the State House were completed Friday.

It was reported Friday that James Leavitt, the engineer who was injured at Farmingdale, was no better and was somewhat deranged.

The Executive Council held a brief session Friday, and confirmed the nominations, including those of the special constables for Waldo county.

Officer Hall of Waterville brought a prisoner to Augusta Thursday morning, and while on his way down was overcome by the heat. He is an Odd Fellow and his brethren in Augusta attended to his wants. He was able to return home on the evening train.

The railroad bridge across "Seven Mile Brook, at Riverside, is to be rebuilt this season and the stone foundation for the piers is now being laid. Four piers will be built and four girders are to be laid, two fifty feet, and two twenty. A large portion of the gap is to be filled in with dirt taken from the bank above the bridge and east of the track. Sufficient dirt will be removed to allow of straightening the track somewhat at this point, there being a sharp curve.

At a meeting of the trustees of the Insane Hospital, Friday, to receive proposals for the extension of the laundry building at the Hospital, the committee refused to receive any proposals presented after the time as signed, and rejected the one proposal made in accordance with the advertisement, because it was for a sum greater than was appropriated by the State. New proposals are advertised for, the time for receiving to expire the 18th inst.

Deputy Commissioner of Labor Campbell was confirmed Friday, says the Journal, and he enters at once upon the discharge of his duties. His office will be at his home in Rockland. The appointment of Mr. Campbell to this important position seems to give general satisfaction. He is a popular gentleman in his section and is a prominent and strong member of the Knights of Labor. He delivered the Fourth of July oration at Vinalhaven. One of his first duties is to send out forms of notice to manufacturers, to be posted in workshops, and he is already attending to this. He will assist the Commissioner of Labor Statistics in the work of the department. Towns are responding very freely to the circulars sent out throughout the State to obtain statistics and other information. Some one hundred and twenty-five have been heard from thus far. The blanks relating to manufacturers' statistics will be issued shortly. On Monday Mr. Matthews will visit Lisbon Falls where there is a small strike in progress and spend the remainder of the week in Lewiston.

Oxford.

The papers of last week contained a statement that Nathan W. Millett, one of the prosperous farmers of Norway, had been killed by an infuriated bull. We have since learned that the report was without foundation. Mr. Millett was not attacked by a bull, and is to-day in his usual health.

Rev. J. H. Cochrane, formerly pastor of the Baptist church at South Paris, and now a missionary in Burmah, writes to friends in Maine that the climate of Burmah, although no excessive hot as to necessitate a change of clothing three times a day, agrees with him. He has grown so fleshy as to be obliged to have larger clothes made for him.

Sagadahoc.

The little Bar Harbor steamer now building at the yard of the New England Shipbuilding Company, at Bath, will be called the Wave. Harbor. She will have the smallest triple expansion engine ever put into a passenger steamer. It will be one of Supt. Hyde's little flying machines, and is to be constructed with a view to economy of space. For this reason the valve arrangement will be at the side instead of at the ends.

Somerset.

Mr. Isaac Savage, of Madison, has corn in his garden which stands over three feet high and was planted out the last day of June.

C. S. Danton, of Concord, met with quite a loss recently. He sold his wool, amounting to thirty dollars, then afterward he took out his wallet to pay for some little article, put it back in his pocket and did not open it again until he got home, when he found his money was gone.

A six-year-old girl, of Palmyra, on returning from Sabbath School, last Sunday, with one of her classmates, asked her father if she might go home with Effie, and he replied that she might go a piece. She went home with her, waited until she changed her dress, and they returned together. When her father inquired of her why she went so far when he told her only to go a piece, she answered, "You told me I might go a piece, so I went the whole piece."

Waldo.

Edwin C. Banks, of Belfast, aged thirty-seven years, committed suicide by hanging in his stable at twelve o'clock, Friday. His residence is very prettily situated on High street, a few rods back from the street. Joining his lot, on the north, Frank Whittemore is building a large, three-story dwelling-house. On the south, the public library, a fine stone structure, is going up. Both of these buildings are somewhat nearer the street than the residence of Mr. Banks. It is said that this fact has caused him to fret a good deal of late, and that he has frequently remarked that Whittemore and the city were bent upon his ruin. In shutting out his view and depreciating his property. It is believed that he brooded over this till it unbalanced his mind. For several years he has been in the employ of George A. Quimby, manufacturer of ready-made clothing. On leaving the shop at twelve o'clock, he went directly home and ended his own life.

New Books.

THE SHAYBACKS IN CAMP, or Ten Summers under Canvas, by Samuel J. Barrows and Isabel C. Barrows, is one of the most charming summer books which has come under our notice. The story of the Shaybacks in Camp, beginning with a summer at Northport, is written in the most charming vein, and Mr. Barrows shows himself to not only thoroughly understand the art of finding out all that is most enjoyable in tenting out life, but of telling of it in the most inimitable manner. His pen pictures of scenery on the Penobscot and on Lake Memphramagog are most delightful. Every one should take it with him on his summer outing. Price $1.00. Published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston and New York, and for sale by Charles Hight.

THE MYSTERY OF BAR HARBOR, by Alsop Leflingwell, will doubtless attract the attention of more or less readers on account of its name, but the story has little to do with Bar Harbor, and is equally as far removed from plausibility, interest or being well written. It is one of those books for which the printer and binder have done more than the author.

DENNIS DAY, CARPET BAGGER, or the story of Mary, by Mrs. George E. Spencer, is a highly sensational southern story based on the idea of the abuse of the colored people by their former masters. Papers covers; price 50 cents.

The above two books are published by G. W. Dillingham, New York, and for sale by D. Bugbee & Co.

THE STORY OF THE NATIONS. The latest addition to this valuable library is The Story of Assyria, by Zenaide A. Ragozin, embracing a period of time from the rise of the Empire to the fall of Nineveh, and cannot fail to be intensely interesting to the student of ancient history. Price $1.50.

THE FEDERAL CONSTITUTION, an essay, by John F. Baker, L. L. B., of the New York Bar, aims "to present in a small compass, and in as clear a light as possible, an outline of the origin, growth and principles of constitutional liberty," as enumerated by the Federal Constitution. Price $1.00. The above two books are published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, and are for sale by D. Bugbee & Co.

THE HOUSE OF THE MUSICIAN, by Virginia W. Johnson, is Number 8 of Ticknor's Paper Series, of which a critic says: It is a remarkable and remarkably interesting book. The plot is absorbing; the characters are clearly and strongly drawn; and the descriptions of Venetian scenery, incident, etc., are such as only an observant eye witness could depict. Published by Ticknor & Co., Boston. Price 50 cents.

The Profits of Base Ball.

[Boston Herald.]

Many of the public are not aware how great are the profits made from directing the game of base ball as a business in some of the cities of the country. For the amount of capital invested, there is probably nothing like it in any form of amusement. The expenses of base ball are, first, in hiring and fitting up the grounds upon which it is played; next, in the salaries paid the players; third, in the travelling expenses of the clubs. None of these require much preliminary outlay. There must be a guaranty as regards some of them, but the game greatly more than pays its way after the season opens. It will be singular if some enterprising manager outside of those who have at present a monopoly of the cream of the business, does not before long devise a method of breaking in upon it. For base ball rightly managed may be made more remunerative than the drama, the concert hall, or the sporting field of any kind.

Boston affords a good example the present year of what may be done in this way. There will be about sixty-three games of base ball played in the league association during the season, of which about twenty have already been played. The attendance at them has averaged fully 4,000 people. This, at fifty cents a ticket, yields considerably more than $2,000 a game, for there are reserved seats, to the amount of 1,200 in number, at twenty-five and fifty cents each, the most of which are generally sold, and there are perquisites of the grounds which bring in money. It is a low estimate to set down the receipts of the season at $135,000. Out of this are to be taken, perhaps, $35,000 for salaries of players, $2,500 for ground expenses, and a considerable sum for the cost of transporting the players from one city to another. It will be liberal to call this altogether $50,000. The profits, therefore, that the season of five months will represent, will be $75,000.

The Boston Base Ball Club is ostensibly a corporation. It was chartered by the State Legislature of 1871. Really, however, it is entirely in the control of three men. They hold a majority of the stock, and they administer affairs as they see fit. They elect themselves president, treasurer and secretary respectively, and vote themselves $2,500 salary each, the duties of these offices being far from onerous.

They make no public report to the stockholders of their business in the different years. They pay no dividends on the stock, notwithstanding the enormous receipts in the way of profits. It is fair, however, to state that they have invested a portion of their profits in the purchase of the ground is on which the games are played in this city. Stockholders other than themselves have no influence upon what is done at the meetings of the corporation. Their policy has not been liberal in the engagement of players in other years. This year the new departure, when the player Kelly was engaged at a premium of $10,000, has brought them such returns as to demonstrate their former shortsightedness. Their general policy is not broad, however. There are often complaints on the part of the public. With the immense sums they are making, these managers have just haggled with the police of Boston about paying them the price for their services that is paid in other cities. Their price for their grounds for the use of others has been $15; yet it is said they have charged the young and struggling Boston Blues, who are compelled to have them, $25, taking advantage of their necessities. Word comes from Washington that they compelled their players to take their baggage and bats into a horse car, as they entered that city, rather than pay for a carriage for them. These things are not what should be expected of men who are making $75,000 a season.

There are great opportunities of profit in base ball, and they are worthy the attention of business men in the amusement line. They will be best developed by a management that treats its players so as to gain their fullest sympathy, and which deals liberally with the public.

Short Cuts.

General Sherman and family have taken a cottage at Lake George for the season.

A Florida woman has made a bed quilt containing 16,000 pieces less than the size of a man's thumb-nail.

An enterprising physician in Australia advertises: "I will pay one-half of the funeral expenses in cases where I am not successful."

It is said that a wealthy editor of Boston has made provision in his will for a fund to establish a professorship of practical journalism at Harvard College.

Dr. John Hall, of New York, gets a salary of $20,000 a year from his church, and $5,000 more from the newspapers and magazines for which he writes.

Woggow, Smrz, Smatrkivolez, Spiuczynski, Hop, Wow, Yschick, Yskia, Zwierzchouska, Szelmochowski and Trjnak are some of the names in the Chicago directory for 1887.

It is said that two electricians at Munich have invented an improvement for the telephone by which words and sentences can be transferred directly to a chemically prepared paper.

The total amount received for the benefit of the sufferers by the recent Opera Comique fire, is 673,000 francs. Orphans and old people affected by the fire will receive temporary aid or annuities.

A New York gossip says in indignation that those silly couples who sit on the stairs to do their flirting, and are indignant because people have to pass up or down, are once again encountered at the summer hotels.

Prof. J. G. Dana, of Yale, will soon start with his family for the Sandwich Islands. He will be absent until September. During his stay Prof. Dana will investigate the changes caused by the recent volcanic eruptions in the Islands.

Miss Constance Fenimore Woolson is spending the summer at Florence, at the Villa Brichieri, mentioned by Mrs. Browning in "Aurora Leigh." She thinks that poet has not done justice to the splendid view commanded from the terrace.

In comparison with the enormous sums sometimes received by specialists who attend to patients at a distance, Emperor William's fee to Dr. Mackenzie, of London, for his three visits to the crown prince does not seem large. It was only $2,500.

General William F. Rogers is the possessor of a stained-glass portrait of George Washington, which was made in China seventy years ago, when the art was almost unknown in this country. The portrait is by Su Ly, after Stewart's celebrated painting, and is life size.

"I am going to buy a light coat to match these pantaloons," he remarked to his wife the other day, "and a light pair of gloves to match the coat, and a light soft hat to match—" "Your head, I suppose," interrupted the spouse gently, and the household knew no harmony that day.

Miss Ellen Terry has been presented by Mr. Henry Irving with Mr. Coleman's play, "An Amber Heart," in which she appeared with such marked success at the Lyceum. Mr. Irving bought the manuscript from the author on the day following the performance, as a mark of his appreciation of Miss Terry's beautiful rendering of the heroine's part.

The counsel of the Andover professors have served notice on the visitors of an appeal to the Supreme Court, from the recent decision in regard to Prof. Egbert Smyth. The court meets in November. E. R. Hoar and Judge French will represent the visitors, and Profs. Dwight and Baldwin and Messrs. Gaston and Russell the professors. The exact form which the appeal will take is not yet stated.

The male wasp never stings. But so long as he and his sister are twins and dress exactly alike, this bit of knowledge availeth nothing to the careless man who does not know it is the lady who is approaching him, until it be that she smiteth him with her bustle. What humanity demands of science, in the case of the wasp, is the invention of some prompter method of distinguishing between Mons eur and Madam-wazzle at forty yards.

A man who has just completed a term of six years in a New York jail, for counterfeiting notes of the Bank of France, has appeared before the court of Brooklyn to demand a genuine note of 1,000 francs which had served him for a pattern, and which had been used as a piece of evidence against him. But nobody knows what has become of it, and the district-attorney, who had it in keeping, has joined with the counterfeiter in demanding an investigation.

It is noted that when the Rev. Samuel Scoville, of Stamford, walked out on the platform of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, the other Sunday morning, some of the members smiled, recalling an incident of years ago. "Next Sunday," Mr. Beecher had said on the occasion in question, "my son-in-law, the Rev. Samuel—," then had paused in perplexity a moment, and had added, with a humorous smile, "I can't think of his other name; we always call him Sam."

Prof. Edward S. Morse, of Salem, Mass., while holding the post of instructor in zoology, at the Imperial University of Japan, a few years ago, conceived the idea of making a historical collection of Japanese pottery. This collection now numbers more than four thousand pieces, and is kept in Prof. Morse's home at Salem. The undertaking was a most ambitious one, for the history of ceramics in Japan runs back to prehistoric ages. The products of the older historic periods were already very rare, and year by year were growing rarer. Their appreciation and discrimination necessitated a vast amount of requisite study as well as a keen eye and taste, and to secure them demanded a large amount of travel and a considerable outlay of money.

Agricultural.

Care of the Roadside.

That the roadway to the centre of the highway belongs to those who own the land on either side is a well-understood fact. Aside from the public use of it, which its owner has given in making it a highway, he is entitled to whatever benefit he can derive from it that will not interfere with the public. Perhaps there is no way so generally acceptable as keeping it seeded with grass and used for mowing. Cultivated crops, unless for one or two seasons, to get the land in shape, are not advisable. Drovers and others have a right to drive stock on the highway, and corn, potatoes or grain would be too tempting. Besides, cultivation makes the roadside unfitted for a walk at almost any season, and thus directly interferes with one of the rights in the roadway to which the public is clearly entitled.

As the wash from the centre of the roadway keeps the adjoining land fertile, grass may be cut almost indefinitely when a good seeding has been once obtained.

A neatly shaven lawn up and down the road, free from weeds and obstructions, adds greatly to the value of a farm, for such neatness always betokens the thrift which accompanies it. If a farmer cannot afford to keep his roadside in repair for what he can get from it, the conclusion is inevitable that he has either a poor farm, or poor management, or both.

It is becoming better understood that the chief requirement of most country roads is thorough drainage, and this it is not possible to give by surface drains. These by the roadside soon fill up because they take the wash of the roadway. Whenever highway commissioners use public funds for underdraining and using stone and gravel on the surface, they make work that stands the test of time.

It is often necessary in underdraining a farm to cross a road, and though this is always done at the lowest and wettest places, the road over the drain and for some distance either way is permanently improved. A drain under the roadbed should be at least three or three and a half feet deep. It will be naturally deeper there than at the sides, and it needs to be deeper, for the frost penetrates the hard trampled ground as it cannot on the sides where the surface is covered with grass. If the road is ridged up so that snow is blown off, frost will sometimes be found in dry, hard ground, to the depth of three and a half feet. The freezing of the drain at this depth is no great matter.

It is now time, if the work has not before been done, to cut grass and weeds along the roadside for the purpose of keeping the latter from seeding. At least twice a year all roadsides should be cut over for this purpose, and to do this with mower or scythe requires that stones and obstructions should be removed. It is the few small stones by the roadside that in most places prevent close cutting either of grass or weeds, and the grass close to the ground is most nutritious and valuable. In many places the roadside is made the catch-all for every kind of obstruction, stones, stumps and the like, removed from the fields. Wherever this is done, these places are the harbor for thistles and other weeds, until they become such a nuisance that the roadside at last has to be cleared up at great cost both of time and labor.

"The New England farmers are undoubtedly the most enterprising and energetic of the Grange fraternity on this continent, comparing well in progressive spirit and action with their ingenious brethren in other respects. They cultivate the least productive natural soils, combat with the most rigorous climate, and yet by dint of industry and skill, their labors annually produce the most liberal returns. The science of farming is well respected and followed in 'Yankee Land' from Nova Scotia to New York. Agricultural societies and institutes and Granges are well distributed and generously supported. The local press of Maine, Massachusetts and other New England States bears evidence of the earnest zeal with which the farmer and horticulturist pursue their honorable calling. They look into the rationale of every department of their industry, whether they are devoted to vegetable production or animal thrift. There are now about 40,000 members of the Grange organization in the New England States alone, and these are earnestly devoted to agricultural improvement and not merely to factional advancement. More progress was made by them in 1886, than during several preceding years. They favor tariff reform, but believe in dividing the "reform" among other fraternities, as well as the farmers. They have seven hundred and fifty reading circles who are studying political, economy and other kindred subjects, and can give a reason for the faith that is within them. They repudiate the new theories of Henry George and other theorists about land, and win the rights due to labor by manual exercise. In fact the New Englanders, with the exception of the transcendentalists and cranks of Boston, have demonstrated themselves 'the salt of the earth,' in all that pertains to essential progress.

MORTIMER WHITEHEAD,
Lecturer National Grange,
Middlebush, N. J."

The aggregate packing in the West for the week shows some reduction, as indicated by the returns and estimates, the total being 200,000 hogs, against 240,000 the preceding week and 230,000 for corresponding time last year; total from March 1 to date 2,625,000, against 2,526,000 a year ago, the increase this season being 105,000 hogs.

Because mucky soil is black many suppose that it is rich. The only thing sure about it is that it is or has been too wet. If after draining it does not produce well it is probable that it lacks mineral fertilizers, phosphate or potash. Usually a year must pass over such land before the underdraining will show its full effects. After dry freezing one winter it will be in good shape the next summer to show what it can do and also whether further manuring is necessary.

Recent experiments confirm the opinion of sanitary authorities that, though natural soil is an excellent filter for impure air that may pass through it, it is a poor filter for infected water. Mr. Raphael Pumpelly, of the National Board of Health, finds that sand interposes absolutely no barrier between wells and infection with germs from cesspools, cemeteries, etc., lying even at great distances in the lower wet stratum of sand; and that if it is probable that a dry gravel, or possibly a dry, coarse sand, is no obstacle to the free entrance into houses above of these organisms which swarm in the ground air around leaky drains.

The Maine Farmer says: Movements of stock are almost at a standstill in our State at the present time. The price of beef is too low to send it to Boston. The home trade is principally supplied with Chicago dressed beef. No one wants to buy steers, and the call for milch cows is very quiet. Never mind, they are all at pasture and doing well on the abundance of grass, and all will pay their way on this cheap feed. Meanwhile study the market reports, watch closely the tide of events, and you will be well posted and able to judge when to dispose of the little surplus that must be sold. Quicker sales and better prices will come in time.

Dew does but little damage to hay in any stage of dryness. It brings some of the juices to the surface and changes the color; also makes it smell sweeter and cattle will often eat hay better that has been wet with dew or a slight shower. If you cannot get hay raked before the dew begins to fall let it lie if the weather looks right. "Make hay while the sun shines." Dry it before you put it in. Steaming in the mow will damage it more than getting wet in the field if it is properly put up. An old farmer's rule, and one that is probably reliable, to tell when clover hay is dry enough to put in the barn is to test it with the thumb-nail. If the bark cannot be scraped from the stalk, it is safe to put it in.

Never in the history of the American cattle trade has the price of good beeves been as low as at present in Chicago. The cattle industry is in a very discouraging condition. As an illustration of the depression, fifteen carloads of Missouri cattle were sold in Chicago last week at $4.05 per hundredweight. The cattle were very heavy and fat, and shrunk less than twenty-five per cent. in dressing. These animals had been corn fed for two years. Last year the owner refused 5½ cents live weight for these beeves, and now, after feeding them a twelvemonth at an enormous cost, sells them at a price nearly $4,000 less than he could have secured last year. One who was present at the time of the sale in Chicago informs the Cultivator that the farmer cried like a child when he saw his pet animals sacrificed at the stock yards.

The squid is highly prized by the Chinese as an article of food, and the Chinese fishermen on the California coast select only the darkest nights in which to fish for them. The squid is about eight inches in length and almost transparent. The fishermen go out some miles, and then build a bright fire in pans and station them in the bow of the boat, and the fish being attracted by the glare swarm around the boats and are gathered in with scoop nets by the ton. They are taken home, the women and children give them a relish and a promise in the way of cleaning, and spread them on boards, on the top of the houses, and out in the fields, where they are dried. The fish are then packed and shipped to San Francisco and to China, where they are considered a great delicacy.

TUESDAY. JULY 12, 1887.

Secretary Whitney has sold his beautiful country residence in Washington for a profit of nearly $70,000

If Mr Blaine is the Presidential nominee in 1888 he will carry this State by 12 000 majority is the opinion the Denver Republican has of Colorado's attitude

Southern factories from 1880 to 1887 have increased in number by 19,613, in capital from $11,166 000 to $371,825,000, and in product from $81,324,794 to $249, 865 000 These are the arguments for protection which are knocking the free traders silly South of Mason and Dixon's line

Col Morrison is alleged to have grown weary of his place on the Inter State Commerce Commission and to sigh for his old seat in Congress He thinks he could beat Hon John Baker next year but this opinion is shared by but few persons and they will quickly change their mind after the ballots are counted should Col Morrison decide to enter the political field again

Those English you know organs published in this country are in a bad state of mind over the distinguished attentions that are being showered upon Mr Parnell Having done their level best to discredit Mr Blaine both at home and abroad they are simply dumbfounded to find the people of England from whom they draw their inspiration engaged in a rivalry as to which one shall do the most for their American visitor

The pugnacious Grand Army men are now wondering what in the world has them

The Grand Army men are not liable to be seriously alarmed at the paper wads discharged by Cleveland who although now professing much devotion to the country was not sufficiently imbued with the spirit of patriotism to expose himself to danger when they did when something more serious than paper bullets filled the air

The Washington correspondent of the Courier Journal writes The attempt to make administration fun rable to President Cleveland by marching the Lynn G. A. R. Post No up to the White House was a failure Out of 1 members but 6 could be induced to go and of this number several explained afterward that they went to pay their respects to the President and to get a meal The resolutions read prepared were written by the officers of the post and passed to counteract the effect of individual demonstration

The flag episode will make every doubtful Southern State solid for Cleveland in 1888 A solid South will again support Cleveland in 188 [illegible]

In the love paragraph we get at the real meaning of the President's battle flag order It had become seriously alarmed at the growing evidence that some of the Southern States were doubtful hence he was ready to do anything to bridge the breach over to reach the captured battle flag forever Now be it said that Mr Cleveland is an honest reformer who does not to play Blind Tigers If any one can find anything more contemptible than this trick he now has a good time to find it

A political fund gratuitously been collected among the colored population of Washington county to the removal of Alexander Lowell who was the private secretary of the late President Arthur and from whom Mr Arthur made the request that he be retained Lowell was a railway clerk detailed to duty in the Supply Division of the Post Office Department He is said by his friends that he was removed solely and simply because he refused to sign and accept a laborer's petition which he declined to do He is backed by the chief clerk of his division a strong faithful and competent clerk It need not be said no charges whatever have been made against him save that of being unwilling to do dirty political work in the office He receives so detailed but those who know Lowell think Messrs Matthews and Trotter the colored man was not Cleveland man

A committee of St Louis men at least a portion of them seem to intimate that the Grand Army boys will be given a cool reception now that the President has decided not to be present on that occasion the Chicago Herald says well says

It is not too late to change the place of meeting and if any considerable number of the people of St Louis sympathize with this feeling let the proper persons take action at once and in a dignified and temperate way revoke the order for the encampment to meet at St Louis It would be a great mistake for the thousands and tens of others of the Union armies to gather in any city disposed to give them a cold reception when Chicago and scores of others will irrespective of party, give them an earnest and hearty welcome

Chicago, or any of the great cities of the West would be only too glad to receive a visit from the grand old veterans of the war and it would be a fitting return for some of the talk that is now being made if the Grand Army should cancel its proposed visit to St Louis and go where the men of army feel sure of a cordial reception

Referring to the action of President Cleveland in declining to visit the Grand Army Encampment at St Louis, General H G Williams Quartermaster General of the Department of Pennsylvania Grand Army of the Republic said

The President has made another blunder Cleveland was never invited by the Grand Army of the Republic to attend their National Encampment The invitation came entirely from citizens of St Louis who wanted the President to attend the Mississippi Valley Fair which takes place in October after our encampment will have ended The citizens prepared an elaborate album took a special car and presented the invitation backed by the large number of names which the album bore Upon returning to St Louis the citizens concluded that the expense attending the entertainment of Cleveland would be great, and the idea of getting the Grand Army people to join in the invitation and make the date of Cleveland's visit so as to include the National Encampment was presented The Grand Army people refused to do so Cleveland's blunder was not in withdrawing his acceptance, but in not saying, when the first publication was made, that he had not been invited by the Grand Army, and that his proposed visit was in no way connected with the National Encampment Should he have decided to go to St. Louis while we were there and have reviewed the parade, there would have been no insult by the Grand Army. We look upon him as the Chief Magistrate of the Nation, and his personality would have been entirely hidden in his official position I repeat President Cleveland has made another blunder, and that is the way the members of the Grand Army of the Republic of Pennsylvania look at it generally

The Administration's Opinion of the Old Soldiers.

Fortunately the danger of serious harm from the Grand Army has been removed by the exposure which it has thus made of its character If it were universally supposed to be an association of old soldiers devoted unselfishly to the public interests its weight might be thrown with tremendous force for or against any measure or any man But when it is seen to be an organization chiefly concerned in extorting undeserved offices and pensions for unworthy members, its endorsement or its condemnation is of little moment No body of men can present a Tuttle and a Fairchild as its perfect flower and long retain the confidence of the American people —New York Evening Post

The above from the organ that claims to more fully voice the sentiments of the Administration than any other, is of particular interest at this time Every old soldier in the country should read and preserve it as showing the exact estimate President Cleveland and his chosen adherents place upon the men who made it possible for him to be Chief Magistrate of the United States This was not necessary to the complete exposure of his hostility to the Union veterans, as every act of his has reflected this same spirit too clearly to be mistaken but it serves as another link in the chain of evidence that will confront the loyal people of this country in the next campaign Pres dent Cleveland has insulted the loyalty of the men who "did the fighting," while he was safely housed in New York, with jibes and sneers in his vetoes of pension claims he has permitted thousands o unfortunate veterans to remain objects of charity, although Congress made ample provision to aid them, he attempted to surrender the blood stained emblems of treason as a sacrifice to his political ambitions, he added fresh insult to the Grand Army by the disgraceful insinuation that he might be in danger of bodily injury should he visit the Encampment at St Louis, thereby casting discredit upon the members of an organization who attested their devotion to patriotism when Grover Cleveland was skulking at home, and now the only reply his chief personal organ can make to the righteous storm of indignation raised by the shameless acts of this Bourbon President is to traduce the noblest body of men in the country as an organization chiefly concerned in extorting undeserved offices and pensions for unworthy members Here we have then the opinion the Administration entertains of the old Union soldiers If, as would seem to be the fact, Mr Cleveland and his lick spittle organs desire to impress upon the minds of the people by this continuous rubbing in process that while he has nothing but admiration for the men who wore the gray he holds in absolute contempt the men who wore the blue they are succeeding admirably What do the loyal men of the country, members of the Grand Army or other wise think about it?

A Reformer Goes Wrong

Another of President Cleveland's reform appointees has gone wrong This time it is a Chief of Division in the Second Comptroller's office, one Oscar J Harvey a Democrat hailing from Pennsylvania He was formerly Chief of a Division in the Third Auditor's office, which has charge of the settlement of claims of army officers on account of horses lost in the military service It appears that Harvey conceived the idea that by forces of fictitious affidavits and signatures he might defraud the Government as well He obtained the names of a large number of ex volunteer officers who were entitled to horses and filed claims in their names for horses lost in the service He procured a number of notarial seals in the names of fictitious persons and used them in the attestation of affidavits and other papers He established a claim agent up in business in Philadelphia and operated in his name Harvey also saved the Second Auditor the trouble of certifying to the genuineness of the signatures of the claimants by forging the certificates In less than two years he prepared and passed some 300 claims on forty six of which he received some $8,200 in cash Other claims were approved and would have been paid if it had not been for an investigation resulting in the above discovery Harvey is now in the District Jail Turn the rascals out," the campaign cry of the Democrats seems to have been changed to turn the rascals in

Blaine and the Mugwump Detectives

[Chicago Tribune]

Mr Blaine's movements in Great Britain appear to be a source of painful solicitude to some of the Mugwump organs They have set a number of reportorial detectives to follow him around and watch his goings and comings to make a record of his visits to note the names and numbers of his callers to pick up scraps of his conversation and to keep diaries concerning the places where he dines Some of the detectives appear to have succeeded in obtaining employment as waiters at the clubs where Mr Blaine is entertained, and the bits of conversation they pick up as they bring on the dishes or lay the covers are eagerly cabled to organs in whose service they are retained The detective reporter has his theory about Mr Blaine's purpose and motives in everything he does or says This is also cabled and the Mugwump editors enlarge on it for the edification of their readers

Curiously enough these reports are contradictory But it is to be feared that this must be ascribed to Mr Blaine's wicked ness Because he did not rush off in hot haste after his arrival in London to exchange courtesies with our aristocratically inclined Minister Phelps, he was accused of an intention to snub that gentleman The next day it was given out that because Phelps did not call on Mr Blaine the latter felt snubbed A few days afterwards Mr Blaine attended a reception where he met the American Minister and was cordial to him The cordiality was ascribed to some sinister motive The man from Maine made the Fourth of July speech at the American banquet It was a good one, of course He was immediately accused of trying to shine at the expense of the Ambassador Mr Blaine requested T P O Connor the well known Irish member of Parliament, to secure seats for the members of his family in the House of Commons gallery O'Connor complied with this request as he has complied with many similar requests made by less distinguished Americans This action of Mr. Blaine's is taken as a bid for the Irish vote

Mr Blaine has had three or four rather prolonged chats with Mr Gladstone. Straighway half a dozen of the journalistic detectives cable their papers that the Plumed Knight and the Grand Old Man are scheming for a political starring session in the United States this fall in order to boom Blaine for the Presidency and Gladstone for the Premiership To the minds of the Vidocq two great men cannot come together without at once beginning to concoct some political plot. Mr Blaine attended the Queen's garden party that is given out as tondying to royalty He is to attend the ceremony of conferring the freedom of a Scotch city on the noted anti-royalist Andrew Carnegie; that will probably be set down as an offensive display of Republicanism and as an affron to Victoria. It is hard to please these Mugwump editors

Mr. Blaine is probably pursuing the even tenor of his way unmindful of the efforts of those little and very mean fellows to misrepresent him He is being entertained in Great Britain as the most distinguished of living Americans He is comporting himself with fitting dignity. The defective gossip about his sayings and doings and the interpretations put on them are nauseating The whole thing is a disgrace to American journalism

MAINE NEWS.

FROM BRIDGTON.

Graduating Exercises of Bridgton Academy.

BRIDGTON, July 11. The graduating exercises of Bridgton Academy opened yesterday most auspiciously with an exceedingly interesting and instructive baccalaureate sermon by Rev. Wm. De Witt Hyde, of Bowdoin College. The text was Paul's injunction to the Corinthians; "Covet earnestly the best gifts; and yet I show unto ye a more excellent way." The discourse was replete with practical suggestions as to the life work of the graduates and was in all respects a rich intellectual feast. The graduating exercises proper occur on Thursday. The graduating class is unusually large.

FROM BRUNSWICK.

A Tie Up at the Cabot Mills.

BRUNSWICK, July 11. The Cabot mill commenced running ten hours Saturday. This soon 225 weavers struck for an increase of five cents on a cut, and quit work to-night. The mill was shut down and seven hundred hands will be idle until the difficulty is settled.

FROM WINTHROP.

Severely Injured by being Thrown from His Horse.

WINTHROP, July 11. Melvin Bailey, who was severely injured by being thrown violently from his horse, remains in a critical condition.

GONE ASHORE.

A Portland Schooner in a Bad Position.

VINEYARD HAVEN, July 11. The brig Hattie M. Bain, of Portland, from Swans Island for Woods Hole with guano, went ashore at Quicks Hole, Vineyard Sound, yesterday morning during a thick fog. An unsuccessful attempt was made by tugs to pull her off yesterday and another attempt will be made to-day after lightening a portion of her cargo. She lies in a bad position but was making no water last night.

FROM CALAIS.

Schooner Ontario Towed In.

CALAIS, July 11. The schooner Ontario, of this port, which went ashore at West Quoddy last week, was hauled off yesterday by tugs and towed to this city, full of water.

FROM ROCKLAND.

The Eastern Yacht Club.

ROCKLAND, July 11. The Eastern Yacht Club arrived at Seal Harbor Saturday and anchored there. The Gitania came to this city yesterday to repair sails, her mainsail having a hole of 200 square feet burned in it. The rest of the yachts arrived to-day and have towed up and will remain here till the weather clears, when they will go to Bar Harbor. The following are now in the harbor: Mohican, Gitania, Audacia, Stranger, Embassadress, Wanderer, Adrienne, Papoose and Latona.

MR. BLAINE IN EDINBURG.

He is Surprised at the Attention Shown Him.

EDINBURG, July 11. Mr. Andrew Carnegie publishes a letter in reference to the failure of Mr. Blaine to obtain admittance to the Council Chamber last Friday, on the occasion of the presentation of the freedom of the city to the writer. Mr. Carnegie says: "I am myself to blame for the affair at the exclusion of Mr. Blaine from the Chamber. I had arranged with Mr. Blaine to accompany him. On the way Miss Blaine met with an accident which caused her an injury to her ankle and she was compelled to return and her father accompanied her back to the hotel. Mr. Blaine was thus retarded." Instead of Mr. Blaine having any cause to complain of neglect on the part of the officials of Edinburg, the interest the Lord Provost and public have manifested in his movements and the universal desire to see and hear him have much surprised him. Accustomed as he is to all this wherever he goes in his own land, he had not expected such a reception as he is everywhere accorded in Great Britain, and no where have the attentions paid him been more marked or more flattering than in Edinburg.

PENSIONS GRANTED.

Additional to Residents of Maine.

WASHINGTON, July 11. Pensions have been granted to the following residents of Maine: Originals—Jas. Ferris, Togus; Ruth Brown, West Athens; George H. Hering, Biddeford; A. J. Hefring, Foxcroft; Ayers Little, Mexico.

FROM BIDDEFORD.

Much Ado About a School House Lot.

BIDDEFORD, July 11. Biddeford citizens are greatly agitated over the high school question. A month ago a vote was passed to build a new high school house. Subsequent meetings have been held to reconsider the action. To-night eight hundred citizens attended a meeting in City Hall to vote on the question of the location of the new building and resulted in 260 votes for the Brackett lot, Union street, and 171 for the circus lot, Alfred street. As two-thirds vote was not obtained the question will probably go before the school board on appeal. An attempt was made to appoint a building committee and provide for the building fund, but the meeting was defeated by a vote to adjourn. Another meeting will be held next Monday.

A SMALL DOG

Causes a Probably Fatal Accident.

NEW YORK, July 11. A small dog run on the track at Brighton Beach, to-day, caused the horse Jessie to fall and Wandermont and Thermania to fall over her. Chandler, who rode Wandermont, escaped with a severe shock. Koeber, who rode Jessie, had his right arm broken. Harris, who rode Thermania, was found bleeding and insensible, his tongue nearly cut off, his skull fractured, and will probably die. Harris was terribly hurt at the West a year or so ago, had his skull trepanned and spent some time in an insane asylum.

NEW YORK.

Jacob Sharp a Very Sick Man.

NEW YORK, July 11. The condition of Jacob Sharp, this afternoon was unchanged. He is said to be a very sick man. Dr. Loomis, who visited him this afternoon, said he was very low and likely to drop off suddenly at any time.

Strike of Railroad Engineers.

The engineers and firemen on the Brooklyn elevated railroad struck at 4 P. M. and traffic on the line was wholly suspended. Later a few trains were run by some of the higher officials in the engineering department of the road. It seems that the trouble has been brewing between the engineers and the management for some time. Several engineers were discharged and the Brotherhood of Engineers at once appointed a committee to wait on the management and demand that the discharged employes be reinstated. The Brotherhood then ordered the men to tie up, and at 4 o'clock this was done.

An Appeal for Sentence.

Lawyers have to-day filed a notice of appeal in the case of Mrs. Cignarel, the husband murderess.

A TERRIBLE DISASTER.

A Yacht Capsized and Many Lives Lost.

A Drunken Captain Responsible.

NEW YORK, July 11. The sloop yacht Mystery left Ruffle Bar, an island in Canarsie Bay, at 7 o'clock last evening, loaded almost to the gunwale with women and children. When off Barren Is and enroute for Canarsie, the yacht capsized and only thirteen of the forty souls composing her passengers and crew are known to have been rescued. The party which was involved in this terrible disaster was made up chiefly of German families resident in Brooklyn and Long Island City. They had come to Canarsie by the early train and hired two yachts, the Mystery and the Christana, to take them to Ruffle Bar. The fathers of several of the families preferred to remain about Canarsie, which accounts to some extent for the preponderance of women and children.

A Plentiful Supply of Beer.

The boats had carried out a plentiful supply of beer which was served freely. The sun was just sinking when the passengers of the Mystery and Christina gathered on the pier to embark for Canarsie. Many of the men of the party showed the effects of the beer they had been drinking so plainly that the skipper thought it best to put the women and children aboard the Mystery, which is a cabin yacht forty feet long and rates as a much safer boat than her consort.

The women protested when they learned that Captain Hendrickson and his nine years old son were all the men aboard. Their protests were unheeded and Hendrickson became so angry that some of the passengers noticed that he also had been drinking too much beer

The Drunken Captain's Recklessness.

Hendrickson said in the hearing of some of the women who were rescued that he was going to get to Canarsie first or "blow a stick out," and gave orders for his nine-year-old son, his only crew, to get ready to shake the reef out of the sail.

Mrs. Switzer, of Green Point, made a most earnest protest against any more sail being put on, as the boat was already heeling over in a way that frightened the women almost into hysterics. Many others joined in the protest but Hendrickson declared he could sail the Mystery through a gale and persisted in his orders.

Cast into the Sea.

The reef knots were unfastened and the boom dropped just as a squall of considerable violence struck the sail. In sailor parlance it knocked the yacht down. In a second she was on her beam ends and all the people who were on deck were struggling in the choppy sea.

The catastrophe was witnessed from the tug J. C. Dean which was then over two miles away from the foundered yacht. Capt. Rowe, of the tug, called for all the steam that could be crowded on and ran to the rescue. For five minutes the yacht remained on her beam ends and the shrouds and bulwarks afforded some hold for the engulfed people.

A Terrible Struggle.

The struggle for a place to hold on to was awful. Fully half of the drowning people were children from babes in arms to six years old. The mothers made frantic efforts to get their little ones to where they could get hold of a rope or a spar and help themselves. One after another they were swept off in the tide-way, and buoyed up by their clothing, their hands waved in frantic and unavailing appeals for help.

A Black Skin Covers a Noble Heart.

Sometime before the Dean got near enough to be of use a negro put out from Barren Island in a row boat and was the first to aid the drowning people. Just as he laid hands upon nearest person the yacht went down with a lurch and all of her that was shown above water was her topmast, the water being dotted with half drowned women still holding to their children.

The negro seemed endowed with superhuman strength and knowledge of what was best to do. Those who were past helping themselves he dragged into the boat, others he lashed to the gunwales. Altogether he saved seven lives.

He Saved His Wife.

When the Dean arrived there were a few of the victims still above the surface. As she neared a woman floating and trying to buoy up her child, a man on the guards suddenly exclaimed, "My God, that is my wife," and dived to her aid. The woman had already lost her grip on the child and was about sinking when he reached her. He had the choice of saving her or his child, and he chose his wife. He and she were soon drawn aboard the Dean, but the child sunk before their eyes

A Scene of Agony.

Every one of the rescued persons had left one or two and in one case three children in the water and as they passed from the apathy of half consciousness into wild hysterics the scene became heart rending in the extreme. Then the husbands coming in from fishing, learning of the disaster and how they had been bereft of wife and children, became wild in the first agonies of their bereavement.

Paid the Penalty.

Nobody knows what became of Captain Hendrickson or his boy, but it is likely that the latter was one of the first drowned. The captain was not seen after the catastrophe.

When the dead roll is fully made up it is believed that it will number not less than 20 and probably 25 persons.

Twenty-Two Persons Lost.

CANARSIE, L. I., July 11. The tug Alpeck, arrived at Canarsie dock this afternoon, having in tow the unfortunate sloop Mystery, which was found filled with water in the channel between Dry Bar and Barren Island. On bailing the water out of the sloop ten bodies were found in the cabin and were identified as follows: Frank and Lizzie Obermoz, of 148 Varick street, whose mother and infant brother were also drowned and their bodies found last night; Margaret O'Brien and two children, Willie and John; Philip and Henry Somberg, children of Mrs. Louise Somberg, of 706 Grand street, who was saved; Mary Grimes, aged twenty-five, of 13 Ellery street, and her two children, Katie and Willie. Deputy Coroner Sielbae says it has now been ascertained that twenty-two persons were lost. A fleet of boats are out looking for the missing bodies.

BELIEVED TO BE DROWNED

Three Midshipmen Missing in a Boat.

HALIFAX, N. S., July 11. Midshipmen Taylor, Stewart and Jenkinson, belonging to Her Majesty's corvette Canada, went for a sail up Bedford Basin yesterday afternoon. It was very squally and they have not since been heard of, but their boat has been found at a small cove in the basin. It is believed they capsized in a squall and were drowned.

Another Despatch.

Three midshipmen of Her Majesty's steamer Canada went sailing in Bedford Basin yesterday afternoon and with their boat have disappeared. They were last seen tacking in a stiff breeze at near dark last evening. It is supposed that the boat was upset by a squall. The boat was a small one and carried but one sail. An oar belonging to the boat was found in the basin to-day. Large parties from the ship have been grappling for the bodies in the basin since daylight this morning, but without success. There is little doubt that all three boys were lost. Their names were Jenkinson, Stewart and Taylor; one was sixteen and the other two fifteen years old. Stewart is said to have been the son of Col. Stewart, who was with the 92nd Highlanders in the Soudan.

A YACHT BURNED.

The Passengers Narrowly Escape.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 11. The sloop yacht Wave, of New York, with a party of New York gentlemen on board, caught fire yesterday afternoon during the storm and burned to the water's edge. The accident happened about three miles from the mouth of the New Haven harbor, and was caused by the explosion of a kerosene oil stove. The party consisted of Captain Stephen A. Cooper, Charles C. A. Jones, W. F. Denyse and Henry F. Terhune. The last named gentleman was badly hurt and is now confined to his bed. The fire spread so rapid y that the yachtsmen, with two sailors, had barely time to take to the gig.

The waves on Long Island Sound were running very high, and it seemed as if the frail craft would be swamped and its passengers drowned. Fortunately the schooner Lydia Christine happened to be near, and rescued the entire party. The vessel was worth $10,000 and was uninsured. The yachtsmen had over $1,000 worth of personal effects and only saved $200 worth. Mr. Terhune was hurt by a fall when getting out of the yacht.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Consolidation in New Hampshire.

CONCORD, N. H., July 11. The Daily Monitor, of this evening, in a leader written by United States Senator William E. Chandler, defines its position on railroad questions. The primary principal advocated is that railroad consolidation should only be permitted with the express consent of the New Hampshire Legislature to each specific consolidation, to be given only after the adoption of due limitations and safeguards for public interests. It favors the establishment of the Merrimac Valley system of railroads substantially as proposed, provided it is surrounded by proper restrictive legislation. It further says: "There is imminent danger that the Concord Railroad and its associate companies, present or contemplated, whatever may be, the result of immediate railroad warfare, will, at no very distant day, pass into the hands of foreign companies with which they are now contending.

"This danger of the ultimate control of our railroads by foreign companies we pointed out and fought against in 1883. We now renew the warning and insist that the Merrimac Valley system, if one is forced into existence by compulsory legislation at this time, shall be carefully protected, not only against seizure by foreign railroads, but against sale to them. The people were to have the Concord Railroad guarded, not against force, but against seduction. The Merrimac Valley fortress must not only be proof against outward assault, but also secure it so that bribery will not open its gate and let in the foreign foe.

The Boston and Maine.

Mr. John W. Sanborn, Superintendent of the Northern Division of the Boston and Maine Railroad, and the agent having charge of its interests before the Legislature, furnishes the following to the Associated Press agent to-night: "The Concord correspondent of the Boston Herald, in this morning's edition, does the Boston and Maine Railroad gross injustice by attempting to connect it with any bill or scheme to abolish the present judiciary and establish a new one. It has no knowledge or connection with any bill to in any way interfere with the New Hampshire Court. On the contrary it is satisfied with that court, as now constituted.

"A policy which would overturn the judiciary on account of an adverse decision would be revolutionary and should never be inaugurated. While the decision referred to unsettled business and made the legislation asked for in the Huzen bill necessary, we have never questioned the ability of doubted the honesty and integrity of the New Hampshire court.

TOOK HER OWN LIFE

Because Her Father Opposed Her Marriage.

ASHEVILLE, S. C., July 11. Miss Viola Meeks, daughter of a prominent citizen of Graham county, was to have been married recently to John Ammons of the same county. Her father, who opposed the match, armed himself on the day of the proposed wedding and swore he would kill Ammons if he appeared on his premises. The daughter said she preferred to marry with her father's consent, but would marry Ammons on that day or die. The father refusing she stepped to an adjoining room. Her father went into the room shortly after and found that his daughter was a corpse and in her hand was a vial labelled strychnine.

MARINE INTELLIGENCE.

The Loss of the Merrimac.

HALIFAX, N. S., July 11. The passengers and crew of the wrecked steamer Merrimac remain off Little Hope Island where the disaster occurred awaiting the arrival of assistance from Halifax. The weather has been stormy since the news of the wreck reached here but as soon as it clears the steamer Goliah will be despatched to the scene. The wrecked people will then be carried to the main land and will be sent on to Boston by way of Yarmouth. They are at present in a destitute condition but it is hardly probable that their sufferings will be protracted. Several narrow escapes from drowning by the disaster are reported but fortunately there was no loss of life whatever and Captain Crowell was the only person injured. The steamer's bottom pounded out within a quarter of an hour after she struck.

Bad Behavior of the Crew.

The passengers of steamer Merrimac claim that while they were trying to save their lives the crew got full of liquor and rifled their baggage below. The steamer struck at 12.30 A. M. Sunday.

Inter-State Commerce.

WASHINGTON, July 11. C. C. Goodrich, general agent of the Hartford and New York Transportation Company, writes to the Inter-State Commerce Commission that the most outrageous wrong doing on cargo freights is practiced by the New York and New England Railroad and the Connecticut Western Railroad in the endeavor to drive out and destroy the water commerce. The roads, he says, having fixed a reasonable rate to Hartford, have put in force an enormous local tariff from river points to inland towns, thus depriving inland points from all benefit of water competition and compelling shippers to send all rail.

Obtaining Loans from Clerks.

The accounts of Mr. Bacon, of the patent office, which were found to be $33,000 short, with a number of due bills from employees as an offset, are still undergoing examination. This discloses the fact that many prominent officials of the Interior Department, both old and recent appointees were in the habit of borrowing from Bacon. One Chief of Division in the patent office, whose due bill for several hundred dollars was found among Bacon's papers, was also in the habit of exacting loans from lady clerks of the division and this case is now under consideration.

It was very foggy at the time and the craft was not seen until just before she was struck, but not in time to evade her. As it was feared that the schooner would sink, the crew was taken aboard the steamer which soon afterwards proceeded on her way to Boston uninjured. The schooner is said to belong in Rockport, but whether in Rockport, Me., or Mass., we were unable to learn as the steamer Penobscot came only as far as Belfast yesterday.

He was taken to his home and a physician set the broken bones.

The Bangors go to Belfast to-day in the steamer M. & M. and it is probable that quite a good-sized party will accompany them. The team will probably stay in Belfast over night, while the M. & M. will return here with the excursionists, and go to Belfast again to-morrow morning to take the nine to Rockland, where they play in the afternoon. The boat will leave Bar Harbor steamboat wharf at 8 o'clock this morning.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

CHAPTER II.

It was at this somewhat critical juncture that Lord Staines took it into his head to come down to Staines Cour , with the avowed intention of remaining there for a considerable time His arrival, which had been preceded by that of his French cook, his house steward, his groom of the chambers, and heaven only knows how many other domestic functionaries (for his style of living had always been far in excess of that warranted by his income), caused quite a little stir in the vicinity, and set everybody conjecturing as to its causes What these were was revealed to us the next morning by Lady Mildred, who lost no time in walking over to see my mother

"Papa has been very unlucky this year," she said, in her gentle, matter of course way "First of all, his horse lost the Derby by a head as you know" ——

"My dear," interrupted my mother, "I am afraid I know nothing about the Derby, except that it is a race which takes place every spring "

"No, you wouldn't. But papa knows a great deal about it, and even I know something Premier must have won if he had not been interfered with It was nobody's fault, but it was poor papa's misfortune, and since then he has been unlucky at Ascot also So there is to be no yachting this summer, and we are going to remain here quietly and ask hardly anybody to stay with us, and Bra kdell is coming down in a few days, so that it will be quite like old times again But I am afraid I have wearied it too much by talking "

Bracknell at the age of 23 was probably very much what my tutor had anticipated that he would be He was one of the handsomest young men about London he was immensely in request with that class who have come to be known in these latter days as 'smart people,' his affairs do count had been numerous and a trifle os tentatious he was owner, or part owner, of several horses which had achieved a certain celebrity and he was pretty deeply in debt I should be puzzled to say what good qualities he possessed beyond that of pluck but I do not in the least wonder at his great popularity Jim who persisted in regarding him as a bright particular star was overjoyed on hearing that he proposed to honor our quiet neighborhood with his presence for a time, and it struck me that Hilda's eyes glistened when this cheering intelligence was conveyed to her

We all—that is the Jim ners Jim and myself—were invited to dine at Staines Court on the evening Ch s arrival and I declare that we had not been seated at the table for five minutes before it was perfectly clear to me that Miss Hilda intended to make him her captive What pull he is going a doubt was the obstacles with which she d fined to ha e any thing to say to him Lord Staines who took me into dinner was obviously depressed and preoccupied when we sat down but Hilda put forth all her very considerable powers of pleasing, and by the time that the fish was removed she had contrived to put her neighbor in the best of good spirits No man was more truly appreciative of feminine beauty and wit than Lord Staines Meanwhile Bracknell who had old Turner on his right hand speedily realized that he had a very charming person on his left and it was not a little amusing to see the look of blank astonishment which overspread his features when after repeated attempts to attract Hilda's notice it dawned upon him that she really preferred his father's conversation to his own I suppose that never before in his life had he known a woman of any person display such extraordinary taste In vain he brought his impressions arts to bear upon her and forced her to look round while he shot languishing glances full into her eyes The glances failed to arouse any response she gave him politely and pleasantly to understand that his interruptions were unwelcome answered him with a few monosyllables on a fruitless task, and immediately turned away to resume her remarks to Lord Staines who was evidently much tickled by the discomfiture of his hear apparent

Jim all this time was very pleasantly engaged in talking over by gone days with Lady Mildred only every now and again his eyes wandered to Hilda and rested upon her with a perfectly look of pride and affection Doubtless he was thinking how good it was of her to take so much trouble to amuse the old gentleman at the head of the table As for the Rev Simeon and myself we ate our dinner which was an excellent one, and nobody took the smallest notice of us

Later in the evening when we assembled in the drawing room, Lord Staines became grave and silent once more black Care having I presume recalled herself to his memory Very soon he murmured some excuse and slipped away—perhaps to try and establish a balance between revenue and expenditure in his study Lady Mildred had some photographs to show to Jim who may or may not have been interested in them as he professed to be Mr Turner for lack of a more worthy listener was fain to favor me with his views upon the subject of secular education and while he was expounding these at some length, I saw exactly what I had expected to see Bracknell seated himself upon a sofa beside Hilda who put up her fan and received Jim with a side glance which was half supercilious, half encouraging He began to address her in a low tone of remonstrance Presumably he was begging to be informed why she had treated him with such marked coolness, for presently I heard her real laughing slightly, "I would n't press that to-night if I were you Lord Bracknell If you do, perhaps I may ask for your version of certain stories that I heard about you in London "

What stories" he returned eagerly Depend upon it, there was n't a word of truth in them Surely you don t believe all you are told And so forth, and so forth

The remainder of the colloquy was carried on in such subdued accents that the eloquence of the Rev Simeon, who was standing very close to me and emphasizing his periods by repeated taps upon my shirt front with his forefinger, drowned it But, indeed, I was not curious to hear more How many times I wonder has that self same dialogue been conducted in identical terms since the world began and how many times will it be repeated before the human race becomes extinct Generally, I think, about five to ten minutes elapse before the point is reached when the lady invites unreserved confession as the preliminary to possible absolution and then the man tells her—well, I suppose he sometimes tells her the truth though I should imagine that that is a rare case What Bracknell said to Hilda after they had moved away slowly toward the open French window through which they presently vanished I have no idea nor can it be of the smallest consequence What I do know is that they were absent for the best part of an hour and that long before the expiration of that time Jim had grown fidgety, Lady Mildred was looking anxious Mr Turner had fallen sound asleep, and this humble chronicler was well nigh worn out with desperate efforts to sustain a conversation which flickered and died the moment it was left alone

At length Lord Staines returned He had been making hay with his hair, from which I concluded that he had failed to discover any arithmetical process by which the greater can be subtracted from the less, and unless I greatly misjudged him, his inward ejaculation on seeing us was, "What! not gone yet!" But he was far too polite to utter any words to that effect, and he discoursed amiably until Bracknell and Hilda reappeared, which they did without the least symptom of embarrassment on either side. Then old Turner woke up suddenly, rubbed his hands, and said that they had had a delightful evening, but that they really mustn't keep the carriage waiting any longer, whereupon we all wished one another good night with alacrity, and the party broke up

Jim's dog cart was at the door, and he had promised to give me a lift home, but as I was putting on my overcoats in the hall he followed me and said "Do you mind waiting a quarter of an hour, Harry? I should like to smoke a cigar with Bracknell before we go "

Of course I replied that I didn't mind at all, and accordingly we adjourned to the smoking room, whither Lord Staines did not accompany us. I don't think I have ever met any one quite so straightforward as Jim. It never occurred to him to approach any subject by a little introductory beating about the bush, as almost all of us do If he had anything to say to you, you might be quite certain that he would say it at once, and in the fewest possible words

"Look here, Bracknell, old chap," said he, "I don't want you to flirt with Hilda Turner We are all friends here, so I don't mind telling you that I mean to ask her to be my wife, though I'd rather you didn't speak about it to any one else just yet "

Something in this announcement seemed to tickle Bracknell amazingly, for his mirth was so immoderate and so prolonged that Jim felt constrained at last to add It isn t a joke '

"Oh, yes it is, my dear boy," returned the other still laughing, it is a first rate joke, if you could only see it Be advised by me, Jim, and drop that young woman like a hot potato She s not the wife for you "

"That's as may be," rejoined Jim, quietly, "but at all events she is not the wife for you '

"I should rather think she wasn't The wife for me is a lady with £50,000 of her own Of course it would be desirable that she should have more, but £50,000 is the irreducible minimum, the governor has just been telling me so By the way, do you think the fair Hilda is going to accept you? "

Jim with a becoming blush admitted that he was sanguine

Well, she may Five thousand a year is not to be sneezed at in these hard times, and I suppose you re worth all that aren't you?"

Jim got up and leaned with his back against the mantelpiece 'Do you know, Bracknell said he 'I don't like that way of talking I am sure you have no intention of hurting my feelings, but, you see it isn't pleasant to me to hear Hilda spoken of '——

As if she resembled other women! All right Jim, I ll spare your feelings for the future and I don't think I'll marry Miss Turner thank you I suppose I may sometimes speak to her though?"

Of course you may," replied Jim, quite gravely If you tell me that you won t flirt with her, that s all I want. Only don't or see what I mean? If you began to pay attention to Hilda, or to any other woman, what possible chance could I have? It stands to reason that I should have none I m neither good looking nor —nor anything. Why I wouldn't even venture to pit myself against Harry Maynard!"

And with this homage to his friend's irresistible attraction and incidental acknowledgment of my own Jim resumed his seat.

Bracknell was a little flattered, I think, and perhaps also (though I am not quite so sure about that) a little touched 'Go on and prosper" said he Marriage is the greatest mistake in the world, but if you will marry, you will Let me know when the event comes off, and I ll be your best man "

It is not always easy to tell how far the sense of duty and honor possessed by men like Bracknell may be relied upon Doubtless there are certain of fenses against their fellow men which they would under no c rcumstances commit, but as for the rest, I should imagine that it was very much a question of temptation Truth compels me to admit that the temptations with which Hilda assailed the heir of Staines Court during the next few weeks were of a nature to try the stoutest powers of resistance I don't say that her tactics were novel but I do say that anything more clever than her employment of them I never saw Of course the young people, as we were generically termed by our elders, were continually together There were rides, there were parties there was lawn tennis—in short, all the ordinary amusements of country house life in the summer time, and to watch Hilda and Bracknell together on those occasions would have been most entertaining if it had not been a little distressing She stirred his curiosity she roused in him a spirit of emulation she flattered his vanity one day only to wound it the next Sometimes she ignored him as obstinately as she had done the first evening, and every now and again when Jim's back was turned, she would favor him with a look which I am quite sure must have sent a thrill through his whole person though he had the credit of being accustomed to such looks All this time she was charming in her demeanor to poo old Jim, with whom however, she now avoided taking solitary walks and the upshot of it was that before a fortnight had passed, she had two sighing lovers at her feet instead of one that may not have been a very wonderful exploit to accomplish, never th less it was a complished with very great skill

How matters must end was obvious enough ye when the catastrophe (for I suppose it must be called a catastrophe) came I confess I was slightly startled It was Mr Turner who apprised me of it Strolling out in the direction of Staines Court one hot morning, I came upon him just as he was hurrying through the gates, and he at once pulled up, took off his hat and began to mop his forehead Evidently he was a prey to conflicting emotions, and, indeed, his first words were a confession that such was the case

My dear Harry," said he 'I am upset—completely u set Tell me now—for you have an old head upon young shoulders—did it ever strike you that there was anything between my daughter and Lord Bracknell?"

I replied that that idea had suggested itself to me

'You don t say so!' exclaimed Mr Turner Dear me! Well, I assure you that I never was more taken aback in my life than when Lord Bracknell came to me last night to tell me that he had proposed to Hilda and had been accepted Ah, I see that you are astonished The fact is that I had formed other—ahem—anticipations Possibly you may have shared those anticipations?"

I signified assent, and he went on 'To tell you the truth, Harry, I should have been better pleased if things had fallen out otherwise. Even now I am not sure— However we shall see I have just received a note from Lord Staines, requesting me to call upon him immediately and I greatly fear that he will not be favorable to the engagement You are very observant, I know have you noticed any signs of his being disposed to—er—welcome dear Hilda as his daughter in law?

I was quite unable to say that I had and I really fe t very sorry for the poor man who seemed, through no fault of his own, to have got between the upper and the nether millstones Nothing was more certain than that he was about to get into serious trouble with the patron of his living and it might be safely predicted that, when he returned home, he would get into trouble not less serious with the controller of the household and his actions I quite understood why he begged me not to mention this to anybody, and also who was meant by that emphatic 'anybody," for a square in the land is worth two in the bush I willingly gave him the required assurance, and he hastened away toward the house, fanning himself with his pocket handkerchief as he went.

—THE— "RAPID," A Double-Action ICE-CREAM FREEZER.

PATENTED.

The Rapid is the result of a careful study of the requirements of an efficient durable and economical Freezer The principles of its construction present the following meritorious points

A free circulation of the material to be frozen between the circumference of the can and centre of freezer, insuring rapid freezing

Double action of the can and beater these revolving at high speed in opposite directions gives the desired result with much saving of time and labor

The exceptional form of the beater producing a very smooth quality of ice cream and by a certain, increasing its bulk two fold

Can be proved "scrapers" which adjusting itself automatically to the side of the can thoroughly removes the frozen cream adhering thereto the same being replaced by the less frozen portion transferred from the centre by the action of the beater

The enlarged capacity of the tub which permits of entirely covering the can as well as the sides of the can, with ice and salt

The special pattern of the iron cross bar carrying the gear wheels which prevents no obstruction when filling the tub with the ice and salt

The careful and accurate fitting of the working parts by which is gained ease in operation and economy in work

The whole character of the materials used the tub of white cedar the can of heavy tin plate, with solid iron cover and bottom and all the iron parts galvanized to prevent rust
